Objectives

Does staff have the tools, resources, and training needed to support clients?

How effective is the coordination between client teams?

Methods

- Anonymous surveys and interviews took place between 10/14 - 11/11 with staff from programs department.
- Different analysis tools and methods to find trends, patterns, etc. (R, Excel, etc.)

Data

- Survey
 - 21 respondents
- Interview
 - 11 one-on-one interviews
- No Life Coaches
- Key takeaways
 - Satisfaction
 - Training
 - Communication & Support
 - Resources
 - Meetings

Satisfaction

Staff generally feels satisfied with their work.

Some differences exist among care coordinators, non-profit leadership, and resource navigators.

1/3 of interviewees shared unprompted positive feedback.

Around 1/2 expressed liking the cause and the work Thaddeus does.

"Everybody's just so nice. Everybody's really friendly and approachable."

-Case Manager

Task Completion*

Staff feels generally able to complete tasks as expected on a regular basis.

Non-profit leadership interns feel some trouble with consistent task completion, presumably because of the unique challenges associated with their role.

*Defined as the frequency of completing tasks accurately and on time(1: Never, 2: Rarely, 3: Sometimes, 4: Often, 5: Always).

Client Load*

Care coordinators typically take on more clients (as expected).

For care coordinators and therapists, managing more clients is associated with higher perceived productivity (positive correlation with task completion).

For therapists though, having a heavier client load is linked to lower perceived productivity (negative correlation with task completion).

*Client load is defined as the number of clients currently serving.

Training

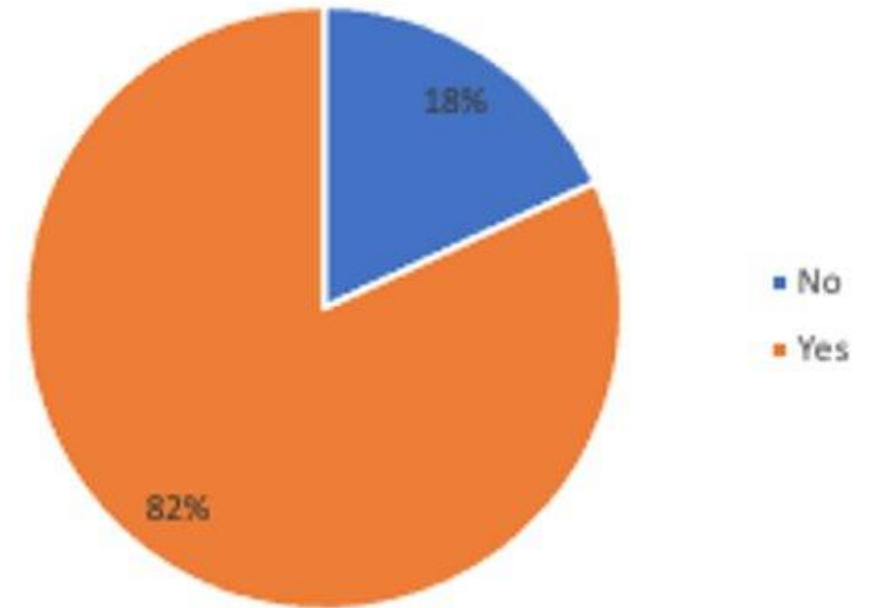

Positive and negative feedback. 82% made mention of needing improvement.

More adequate training is strongly associated with higher perceived productivity (0.69 correlation).

Survey also reveals that:

- Care coordinators and therapists report strong technical and role-specific training, but weaker client-focused training (e.g., community resources, partnerships, client interactions).
- Case managers would appreciate more technical training in using internal tools and systems.
- Non-profit leadership reports weaker training across multiple areas compared to other roles.

Training Needs Improvement

"I think the trainings could be updated or a little more like in depth, but um, I think there's a ton of resources if you know where to find them. But that's a whole another thing is like trying to access the SharePoint and the OneNote and all of that stuff."

-Care Coordinator

Communication & Internal Support

- Universal positive responses to buddy system and feeling safe to raise questions.
- Staff appreciates opportunities to take on new challenges, make suggestions, and collaborate.
- 5 out of 6 roles expressed challenges with communication and internal support.
- Specific challenges with Google Voice, responses from leadership, client teams, client communication, staff changes and scheduling, and role expectations.*

"Google Voice is my biggest enemy."

-Case Manager

"We need a department lead... someone easier to access."

-Care Coordinator

Meetings

- Over 70% had positive things to say about department meetings and collaboration.*
- 5 out of 6 roles expressed negative feelings towards all staff meetings.

"I like the department meetings. I love that we have the client meetings, that set time to connect."

-Care Coordinator 1

"Sometimes the weekly meetings are not always the most productive. I don't always think they're the best use of my time."

-Care Coordinator 2

Recommendations

- Training:
 - More well-rounded and specific trainings for each role.
 - Create clear outlines and structures for each role.
 - Provide examples and set clear expectations.
- Communication & Support:
 - Track and response log for client calls.
 - Less people interacting with clients.
 - Department representatives to help streamline the sharing of information between leadership and team, help with approvals, etc.
 - Personal responsibility
- Resources:
 - Clean up and consolidate resources.
 - Provide templates.
- Meetings:
 - Identify needs and benefits.
 - Reconsider attendance and scheduling.
